Chemical Injury and the Courts, is an essential read for every environmental activist. Immeasurable hours of time and energy will be saved, because of this book. Many valuable examples of what other groups have gone through are cited and as a environmental veteran of many fights I believe me this is priceless information! Step by step assistance and checkpoints in choosing a lawyer for your environmental fight detailed in easy to understand instructions. Important questions your group needs to ask are listed one by one. Questions that when addressed properly could save your group thousands of dollars in their fight for environmental justice. Your choice of lawyer may be the key issue in whether you win or loose your case, and this book helps you to better make that decision. As an added bonus, this book is written from the point of view of one that has been there. Linda Price King has worked extensively with grass roots environmental groups around the country. So often, books written for the environmental movement by so called professionals and advisors are clueless to how an actual environmental battle is carried on. Miss King uses all of her expertise and experience in providing a book that will help environmental groups in their battles and that is a victory for all hard working grassroots environmental groups everywhere.
